A WALK DOWN THE PATH

On: M & M's

I have a couple M & M dispensers in my office. One is a golfer M & M character while the other is a police officer M & M character. I had a third one, a car filled with M & M characters, but it broke (perhaps from overuse). All of them worked basically the same way. You pull down the arm of the M & M character so the delightful candy morsels can be dispensed into a receiving tray.

I reserve the use of these dispensers for human beings only, and they basically cannot be taller than the doorknob of my office. (While I do make exceptions from time to time, I'm pretty sure that real life characters like Dustin Mengarelli, David Maples, and some others are too big and too ornery to me to enjoy the exceptions!) It's not uncommon for me to have a parade of little people following me into the offices after Sunday worship to try their hand at pulling down the machines' hands. In fact, it is not unusual for some little people to come get me and take me to the office so they can get a special treat.

This past Sunday was not an exception. Among my customers were two of my grandchildren. As I was assisting one of them, the other two-year-old Kennon, climbed up in the glider chair. I asked him if he wanted some M & M's. He declined the offer while he spread out his small frame in the adult sized seat, arms and legs splayed out in a very relaxed reclining position. After serving up a lunchtime appetizer to little Mariah, Kennon's cousin, I heard a small voice in two-year-old grammar say something similar to, "Grandpa, I want some M & M's." I looked at him and asked to verify the statement, "You want some M & M's?" His reply, "Yep!" I said, "Come here and get some." He said very leisurely, "No, you get them for me." "You want me to get your M & M's for you?"

"Yep!"

Well, he ended up getting his own, but I got to thinking about that. Whose example was he following to so casually expect to be waited upon while reclining in his chair. Surely not me! (I suspect I know the correct answer, but that really isn't all that important.)

All of this leads to a much larger and more important question: How well do we give examples for our faith? How well do people we know and have influence over, copy our behavior, our character, our faith? How important is our "imitationalness" (yes, I did just make up that word)? Well...I think it's pretty important.

Paul says in 1 Corinthians 4: 16, "Be imitators of me." In 1 Corinthians 11:1 he states it this way, "Be imitators of me, as I also am of Christ." He repeats that idea in Ephesians 5:1, Philippians 3:17, and again in 1 Thessalonians 3:7. This idea of having a life character that should be imitated runs counter to our cultural tendency. Public people (particularly professional athletes) tell people NOT to imitate them. Other adults tell us to learn from their mistakes or "do what I say, not what I do."

As believers, as people committed to the Lord Jesus, we ought to take Paul's approach. Our lives should be models to follow. We should unabashedly tell people to follow our examples. Will we err at times? Certainly. But our example is not for someone to learn from our mistakes, but rather to learn from our successes in our persistence in holiness and in our pursuit of God.

Be a good example. Influence people to join you in your imitation of Christ. Then, sit back and enjoy the M & M's.

Steve

Harvest Weekend, November 18-19. Harvest Goal: $10,444

Join us for a Harvest, Saturday and Sunday, November 18-19. Harvest is a time we focus on giving thanks for and serving the missionaries and organizations we support. We begin the weekend with prayer, as we have a prayer chain all day Saturday, November 18. Sign up in the church foyer for a time slot to pray at the church. On Sunday morning, we have a special guest to share a mission-focused message: Amy Bringhurst, the daughter of Steve and Linda Seehorn, will share about her recent experiences serving in Africa. Also on Sunday morning, we will collect the special offering envelopes for our Harvest Collection, expecting to raise at least $10,444 for our missionaries.

The weekend concludes with a Thanksgiving Celebration and Feast on Sunday evening, where we will learn our total and hear once again from Amy. Turkeys will be provided by the church and prepared by volunteers, and we ask everyone else to bring Thanksgiving sides and desserts for the meal. Sign up in the church foyer if you will prepare a turkey, dressing, and gravy.

YOUTH MINISTRIES

Hey everybody, the youth group has been in full swing for a while now and things are going very well. Youth group will continue on Sunday afternoons at 4pm. We have been having a blast and the more the merrier so do not be shy in coming or inviting others. We have been getting a foundation built and will likely be beginning a series of lessons soon that will be great so please come check it out.

Coming up soon is the Oasis Conference in Manhattan. Preregistration has passed, but this does not mean that the opportunity to come has passed. Please contact me with interest. It will be a great experience to grow closer to Christ and have a blast doing it. It will be Nov. 17th and 18th.

Children's church is going well, but we hope to make some slight changes going forward to make it more efficient and more productive. We want to do this ministry as best we can to raise up the youngest part of the Rolling Hills Church Family into a good relationship with Christ. If you are willing to volunteer to help with Sunday School or Kid's Church or the Nursery, please contact me.

This is going to be a great month! Please contact me with questions or concerns. I am open to constructive criticism and ideas so please let me know what is on your mind. I am looking to lead our youth to Christ, and we had a great start so far. There is always room to grow, so I hope to continue to improve this ministry.
